

Editorial

It is indeed an honour and a privilege to continue to be involved in the Ceylon Journal of otolaryngology (CJLO) for the year 2017 through 2016. The response to our call for original research articles and case reports has been tremendous. With local and international authors contributing quality articles. It is unfortunate that all submitted articles and case reports could not make 'the final cut'. We however, do wish that all concerned authors do not give up hope and keep on submitting. The editorial team is always willing to lend a helping hand to anyone.

A significant change from the previous year is that our journal is now registered online (eISSN) and has a '1 star' level according to the Journal Publishing Practices and Standards (JPPS) rating system. Articles published in our Journal will now be linked with Crossref™ for content and will have an open access policy making the research freely available to the public. Our Journal has also been registered as peer reviewed.

We have also decided to include a 'NEWS' section to the journal in order to update our subscribers on significant events that happened during the course of the year. The online journal can be viewed through the hyperlink <https://cjo.sljol.info>.

We would like to thank all those who contributed to the journal and wish their continued support for future issues as well.

We have the potential; it is imperative that we let the world know it. Keep on publishing.
